Major Stephen C. Webster, D.D.S. and his wife, Nancy, will celebrate their 45th wedding anniversary at Shady Brook Country Club on April 7. On June 3, 1975, they were married in the chapel of the 7th Circuit Court. Major Stephen Webster is retired from the United States Air Force where he served his country for 28 years. He is a graduate of Kent State University in Ohio with a degree in business administration. He is now an accounting specialist with the CPA firm of Fox and Company in St. Charles. Nancy's parents are the late John and Louise Alphan and her step-father is Ted Alphan. The Websters have two daughters, Danielle and Desiree and one son, Paul. Fatal tuberculosis in a patient with advanced chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. A patient with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) and lymphoma was successfully treated for disseminated Mycobacterium tuberculosis, including the central nervous system (CNS). In this case, the lungs were the only site of disease detected at autopsy. The diagnosis of M. tuberculosis was made because of a high index of suspicion based on clinical presentation and laboratory findings. The patient presented with a 3-month history of cough and dyspnea, and was treated with a combination of antimicrobial agents. Despite improvement in pulmonary function, the disease progressed into the CNS, producing symptoms of increasing lethargy, ataxia, paresis, and coma. Neurologic recovery was poor, with death occurring 18 days after initial presentation. This case illustrates the need to suspect tuberculosis and administer appropriate antimicrobial treatment for latent tuberculosis infection even in the setting of advanced COPD. More Interview Questions for those working in the hospitality industry Recently a newspaper enquired for some interview questions to ask the prospective candidates when applying for a position in the hospitality industry. The interview was to be conducted over the telephone. A woman named Rona was handling the call. I was impressed because from the beginning of her conversation she showed how she was able to read the prospective candidate's body language. Rona discovered that the candidate was uncomfortable and started to make extra efforts to find the answers to the interview questions. As I listened, I was able to identify some areas to improve on in my communication and interview techniques. • Questions for those working in the hospitality industry (audio) • Interview Tips (audio) • The Art of Communication (audio)

University of Vermont student Cammi Brummitt's dreadlocks — one of the first hair-dos in the United States — earned her a $1,000 prize after she entered a competition run by the hairstylist who created the style. "I was barely 19 years old, and no one had ever heard of dreads," Brummitt told Good Morning America. "And I had just gotten off of the bus from a month of snowboarding in Maine — it was super cold, I had been partying all weekend, and when my hair was dry, I got on the bus with wet dreads." But 30 minutes after getting out of the shower, a classmate told her, "You're not going to the homecoming dance with wet hair," she told GMA. "And I was like, 'I don't care. I'm going to go like this.'" She only realized her mistake when she got to the dance. "He poked me and said, 'Hey, are your dreads on? You look like a supermodel,'" she said. "And I was like, 'Why is everyone looking at my hair like it's a fashion trend now?'" The hairstylist, who goes by the name Kjeld L. Johnson, was so struck by Brummitt's homecoming pep that he decided to enter her in a contest — and after winning the competition in 2010, he's been styling her dreads ever since. "When I saw Cammi, the first thing that came to my mind, that hair, was, 'I did this,'" Johnson told GMA. "That's when I really want to keep doing this." But Johnson soon ran into challenges that left him contemplating whether she could keep her style going. For one, it's a complicated look, and Brummitt admits she's not the best at maintaining it. "I just try to take good care of it," she said, adding that she switched to a new hair product last year to help with the upkeep. "Once you wash it, you have to wash it every three days and at least three times a
